

Representation Just as Excellent the Second Time Around

“ Mark Lewis is amazing. He is the very antithesis of what your perception of a lawyer may be. He is kind and understanding, and he listens to your concerns. He seems to anticipate what you need to know, and then explains it in terms you can understand.

I feel so lucky to have found Kitrick, Lewis & Harris. I don't believe any other law firm, or any other lawyer, could have handled my cases so successfully. I think I received far more compensation than I would have with anyone else. ”

Multi-car Accident Has Serious Consequences

At the age of 23, Andrea Denhaan met Mark Lewis when she was involved in a multiple-car collision on a Columbus freeway under construction. Hit by a semi-truck, her car spun around and hit the guard rail. There was one fatality in the resulting five-car pile-up, and Andrea sustained serious injuries that included broken bones in her right hand, a broken left shoulder, four broken ribs, lacerations on her hands and knees, and a severe concussion. She spent two days in the hospital, but the real work began after she was released, as extensive physical therapy was required to rehabilitate her hand and shoulder.

A friend of Andrea's father knew Mark Lewis and recommended him to represent Andrea in a litigation that was sure to be difficult. Indeed, the case against the trucking company was complicated, as it involved multiple plaintiffs, all of whom, like Andrea, had sustained serious injuries. In the end, Andrea's medical bills and rehab expenses were covered and she received additional compensation for her pain and suffering.

“Throughout the year-long litigation, I was struck by the fact that Mark kept not only my best interests in mind, but was also sensitive to the other people involved in the accident,” she said. “He wanted all of us to receive fair and just compensation for the injuries that would likely affect us for the rest of our lives. He was extremely sympathetic with the family of the young man who was killed, and treated them with kindness and compassion.”

Disaster Strikes Again

Fast forward to 2014. At 7:45 on a Thursday morning, Andrea was rear-ended by an intoxicated driver. She suffered a herniated disc in her neck that, even today, is still with her. She required physical therapy once again, and went through long months of learning to manage the pain.

Mark Lewis came to Andrea's rescue yet again. The driver's insurance company fought hard to limit the compensation Andrea was due, and it was a two-year-long process before the case was settled.

"This litigation process was even harder - and lasted longer - than the first one had been," Andrea noted. "The insurance company fought us every step of the way. I was in so much pain, and frustrated, but Mark was a calming influence who encouraged me to concentrate on getting well and leave the legal wrangling to him."

In the end, Andrea was fairly compensated, and her medical bills were covered. Today, she lives with the life-long residual effects of the two accidents - pain, difficulty driving, bending and doing repetitive tasks - but she is grateful to Mark and his team for their kindness and patience handling her many questions and concerns, terminating in successful conclusions to both her cases.

"For anyone who finds themselves in need of personal injury attorneys, I highly recommend Kitrick, Lewis & Harris," Andrea said. "The lawyers treat every case - whether small settlements or multi-million-dollar ones - with the same amount of attention to detail. They made me feel that I was just as important as everyone else. That made a huge impression on me."
